FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

NATIONAL PARKS LITTER CRISIS BOOK NOW AVAILABLE

Dayton, Virginia (January 16, 2017) - Kiser Environmental Consulting (KEC) announces the availability of its recently completed book focusing on litter in our national parks. "This essential publication provides detailed results from a comprehensive field investigation conducted in six national parks plus numerous state parks and other protected areas in the American west," says Jonathan Kiser, KEC President. "Included is photographic evidence of litter in each location, comparative ranking scale findings, and litter documentation on an individual material basis. We also present recommendations on how to address this widespread problem. Unfortunately, all types of litter, including paper, plastic, cigarette butts, metals, food, and more, were discovered throughout the parks," Kiser notes. "Paper discards represented 49% of the more than 1,600 individual pieces of litter counted, followed by cigarette butts (27%), and plastic (14%). More aggressive public education outreach efforts, coupled with improved waste management, composting, recycling, and anti-litter infrastructure are obvious ways to begin to reverse this serious situation."

The 141-page Litter Crisis book is only $29.99 and can be ordered in the Reports For Sale section of KEC's website at www.kecgreen.com or by calling KEC at 703-431-1106. The website also showcases KEC products and services relating to recycling, waste management, energy, climate change and other environmental issues. "We have had the good fortune of solving complex, time-sensitive issues for clients such as the Virginia Department of Environmental Quality, World Bank, the National Solid Wastes Management Association, New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection, and the U.S. Trade and Development agency," notes Kiser.
