

SAMR Inc. is Celebrating 20 years in the Electronics Recycling Business

Over the last twenty years, we've seen a lot happen: good times & bad times, prosperity and adversity, and all kinds of new advancements in the technology sector. At the beginning of that time period, SAMR Inc. started as a small electronics recycling facility in Lakewood, NJ. From its humble beginnings up to the present day, the company has been led by founder & President Albert Boufarah. Guided by his passion for sustainability along with his solid work ethic, Boufarah has seen the company grow from a local Jersey Shore recycler to a regional powerhouse with multiple locations and customers in 10 states along the Eastern Seaboard. While this year marks SAMR Inc.'s 20th year in the electronics recycling industry, the company is not content to rest on its laurels. By 2030, they hope to increase their e-waste recycling capabilities by 200% and expand to other states on the outskirts of their current area of operation.

The company's longevity can be attributed to a number of factors. From day one, they have always made it a point to have prompt, courteous, reliable service. Fostering a positive relationship between company & customer starts with treating others the way you wish to be treated and always keeping your promises. Having a focused & dedicated person at the helm in Boufarah has also played a large part in SAMR Inc.'s long term success.

SAMR Inc. looks back fondly on the last twenty years, but is always looking ahead and completely focused on the next twenty. Everything from additional expansion to recycling additional items beyond electronics is on the table. They remain steadfast in their commitment toward total customer satisfaction.
